

Prof Alence holds AM and PhD degrees in political science from Stanford University. His main interests are in the areas of political economy, African development, and quantitative research methods. His PhD on government responses to global trade shocks in Ghana was awarded the American Political Science Association's prize for best thesis in political economy. At Wits since 2002, he has supervised two completed PhD theses and sixteen MA research reports, including nine distinctions and two winners of the School of Social Sciences postgraduate research prize. While on sabbatical during the 2008-2009 academic year, he was Visiting Associate Professor at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, where he continues to serve on the advisory committee of the African Social Research Initiative. Before coming to Wits, he held positions at the University of the Western Cape and at the Human Sciences Research Council, and he spent one year as a Fulbright researcher at the University of Ghana's Legon Centre for International Affairs. His research has appeared in journals such as Journal of Modern African Studies, Journal of Democracy, and Journal of African History.